The Council was informed that the land required for reconstruction was all probably donated by the owners, as they were all very desirous to see this road put through. Further it was suggested that when the construction was complete, the road be gravelled, and in order to make this possible, the people of the town be asked to place a few cents on the wheels, and his body was shoved about one hundred feet before the accident was noticed. He was rushed to the Wetaskiwin hospital in Moore's ambulance, where everything possible is being done to save the limb from amputation.

WHERE BRITAIN LEADS

With the launching of their latest and greatest passenger air-liner, the Helens, Imperial Airways has now in operation eight 2,200 horsepower aircraft. Four of these, the Hercules, Hercules, Hercules, and Helens, are on the London to Paris air-mail route; four on the Cairo to India route; the Hannibal, the Hadrian, the Hannu and the Horsa. The planes for the Paris trip carry as many as thirty-eight passengers and one thousand pounds of mail and freight, while those on the London to India have spacious accommodation for eighteen passengers and 3,500 pounds of mail and freight. The British machines of today out-class utterly those of even three years ago, and are the finest in the world. On these great air-liners the passengers can converse without raising their voices, the noise difficulty having been so completely overcome. In the matter of commercial flying Europe is now to lead the world, and in the matter of passenger air-liners Britain easily leads Europe.—The New Outlook.

In 1931, 30,209 Canadians returned from U.S. to their native land.

WINFIELD U.F.A.

Winfield U.F.A. held another dance at Drader's mill last Saturday. A large crowd was in attendance and as usual, all had a carefree, happy time. A six piece orchestra furnished the music and "merriment waxed supreme." At supper time a short play was staged and musical selections were given. After supper, Mr. Drader added a special surprise by passing fire.

The U.F.A. membership is now 27. One of the mistakes in the U.F.A. dances were held in the Winfield district on Saturday night, the U.F.A. dance and one at Mr. J. Abbott's home near Nelspur. As both places were filled to capacity and good times had, no special harm was done.

Mr. Drader has offered to saw the lumber free and Mr. Carroll is furnishing the heavy timbers. Winfield certainly needs a hall and we are going to have a real one.

LIBRARY NOTES

A book of interest to lovers of adventure and exploring stories is "The Shores of Adventure" by Everett McNeil. Telling of the voyage to America with Captain Cartier, in which he discovered that great and unknown river, which the savages called Sochelega (St. Lawrence), and the story of how the Casket of Quetzalcoatl was found, the evil happenings which followed its coming, and the swift and dreadful punishment that in the end overwhelmed the "Evil Three."

A book of family life is "Ultima Thule" by Henry Hancol Richardson. When for the third time in his Australia, it was to find that the life, Richard Mahoney set foot in fortune with which that country a few years back had so airily invested him, no longer existed. An arresting story of the courage and endurance of Richard's wife in the bush.

One of the most outstanding books in the library is the "Swan Song" by the famed author John Galsworthy. This book is considered one of his best.

"Connie Burt" by Guy Boothby, is a book full of thrills and excitement. "Pete the Whaler," his early life and adventures in the Arctic regions by William Kingston, is a delightful book for boys; and for girls "Eight Cousins" by Louisa M. Alcott.

Alberta Legislative Assembly

(Interesting news letter from our Correspondent in the Press Gallery, Parliament Buildings,

Edmonton, March 12.—If Government anticipations are realized, the present session of the legislature will be prorogued on March 24th in order that members may be home for Easter.

The announcement was brought about by a motion by the Premier that the house sit Wednesday night and also Saturday afternoon.

A debate on a resolution moved by George H. Webster, Liberal leader, asking that wheat pool trust funds be invested in order to provide agricultural scholarships at the Alberta University aroused considerable debate.

Mr. Webster attacked the expenditures from this fund from year to year in no measured tones. He declared that far too much had been spent on traveling expenses and that none of the money had been used in the interests of agriculture. He quoted figures showing that large sums had been paid to various co-operative associations. It was a wrong principle, he declared, to make grants to associations which were losing money in order that they might compete against men who had been successful in building up big business of their own.

Mr. Webster was warmly supported by H. J. Montgomery, Liberal, Wetaskiwin, and Hector Lang, Liberal, Medicine Hat.

He also received support from the Conservative benches. D.
M. Duggan, leader, expressing heartiest sympathy with the resolution.

Premier Brownlee strongly defended expenditures from the fund, urging that money spent for co-operation was of the greatest value to the agriculture of this province. Hon.
George Hoadley, Minister of Agriculture, also defended the trustees. Hon.
Percy Baker agreed with the idea of more scholarships, but did not see that this particular fund should be used to supply them.

Premier Brownlee suggested that the resolution might obtain stronger support if the scholarships were to be provided at provincial schools of agriculture instead of at the University.

The resolution, however, was lost.
Discussion of the bill to validate the agreement with the Dominion Government for policing the province by the R.C.M.P. provided the opposition with plenty of ammunition. The Liberal benches were particularly active in their questions. H. J. Montgomery being continually on his feet with queries in the interests of men of the A.P.P.

At one stage of the discussion, F.
C. Moyer, Independent, Drumheller, declared he would vote against the bill unless greater clarity were given.

The pension fund was the cause of most of the queries and the discussion waxed back and forth across the house, with the opposition raising point after point, the Liberals leading the way with this verbal barrage.
In the end the bill was passed.

J. M. Decline, Liberal, St. Paul, had a couple of hours all to himself when he proposed a resolution urging that the money collected by means of the supplementary tax be used for roadway purposes in the municipalities in which it was collected.

He pointed out that roadway work was urgently needed in many parts of the province. The cutting down of the estimates in the public works department would result in many municipalities being unable to provide relief for their unemployed.

At one stage he said the Premier reminded him of Eliza crossing the river, jumping from one ice cake to the other, but safely reaching the shore; so the Premier could jump all over the place and yet had the ability to defend the government no matter in what corner it found itself.

The resolution was defeated, no other member speaking to it.

A resolution of W. H. Shields, U.
F. A., Stettler, urging an investigation into the possibilities of substituting a "managed currency" in place of the present gold system, also brought a long debate in which the Liberals took no part. Contrary to expectations it was given support by

D. M. Duggan, Conservative leader, and in the end was passed unanimously.

H. J. Montgomery, Liberal, Wetaskiwin, in discussing the resolution, strongly urged a cancellation of war debts and the lowering of existing tariffs.

A motion by H. Bossenberry, Liberal, requesting the provincial auditor to furnish any member with information concerning the financial affairs of the province was defeated.
Conservatives and Labor voting with the government. Those opposed numbered 45, those in favor 11.

Mr. Bossenberry contended the taxpayers were entitled to the information and the only way they could get it was through their legislative representatives.

Premier Brownlee said the resolution touched upon a vital principle of government administration. The provincial auditor was a servant of the legislature and not of an individual legislator.

J. J. Bowen, Liberal, said it was often necessary to have correct figures which could only be obtained from the auditor. He was supported by F. R. Falconer, Liberal.

W. R. Howson, Liberal, agreed that the Premier could always give out correct information because he had it, but the opposition could not get that information and then they were accused by Hon. O. L. McPherson of giving out half truths. He resented that suggestion from the Minister as a veiled insult.

Mr. Howson was called to order by the Speaker who said he could not make use of the word insult or insulting. Mr. Howson withdrew "veiled insult" and substituted "veiled suggestion."

The motion was strongly opposed by the treasury benches and was supported by F. C. McGill, Conservative, Calgary. It was defeated by 45 to 11.

Introduction of the income tax act provided another opportunity for the opposition to get busy. As previously indicated, the Liberals strongly opposed the measure from the start. It weathered its first storm on March 11, reading when, by a vote of 47 to 11,
the house approved its introduction.
Being a money bill the approval of the Lieutenant governor first had to be obtained and then a resolution placed on the order paper giving notice of its introduction.

When the bill came up for second reading a further headwind was loosed.
This time the Liberals were in the fore. Fred White, Calgary, while agreeing with the principle of an income tax declared the present schedule which taxed incomes as low as $750 was unfair. He moved an amending declaration: "In the opinion of the legislature the bill, as drawn, conflicts with the proper principle of an income tax by encroaching on the subsistence wage of single and married workers and should be redrafted on the basis that will confine its effects to surplus income and corporation revenue."

At the conclusion of Mr. White's speech, Mr. Webster moved the adjournment of the debate. When it is resumed the heavy artillery of the Liberals is expected to get into action.

Limiting of ministerial and other government salaries to a maximum of $5,000 and advocated by W. R.
Howson, Liberal, during a discussion of the estimates. He urged that those in excess of this amount make voluntary contributions to the unemployment relief fund. His motion was lost.

For the most part the week has been taken up with the discussion of private members resolutions. A resolution moved by Andrew Smeaton, Lethbridge, after being amended, which urged the necessity of unemployment insurance was passed unanimously. A suggestion by George H.
Webster, to make it read contributory unemployment insurance failed to receive support.

Another resolution which met no opposition was moved by Chris. Put-tinson, Edson. It urged the appointment of a committee to investigate and report on the advantages of state medicine. It caused a lengthy debate but received the support of the medical members of the house. The Liberals took no part in this long talkfest.

Dividing on non-party lines, the house adopted a motion calling for a conference of legislators of three prairie provinces. The Liberals voted solidly against this resolution.
They were supported by five Conservatives and six members on the government side, including Hon. O. L.
McPherson and Hon. V. W. Smith.

Replying to questions of George H.
Webster, Hon. George Hoadley informed the house that it would cost between $60,000 and $70,000 for temporary seed grain during the coming season.

A resolution of Hugh C. Farthing, Conservative, Calgary, asking for full statements of the amount spent in advertising by certain co-operative associations, with the L.E.A. provoked a strenuous defence on the part of the government. It was lost on a vote of 37 to 16. Liberals supported the Conservatives although they took no part in the debate. Independents also voted against the government.

White estimates were being discussed Mr. Webster stated the Liberals had been accused of being the most inquisitive group in the house.
They intended, he said, to retain that inquisitiveness as long as it was necessary to obtain information from the government.

Thursday afternoon tributes were paid to the A.P.P. by Attorney-General Lymburn, W. R. Howson, J. Mackintosh, Bow Valley, Fred White, Calgary and D. M. Duggan.

Mr. Webster and Premier Brownlee had a number of sharp exchanges Thursday, just before consideration of estimates was resumed. Mr.
Webster intimated he had prepared a list of questions which he wished to hand to the provincial treasurer in order that the government might be prepared to deal with them when the items came up for consideration.

He was particularly in search of information concerning the public debt. He regretted the provincial treasurer had not closed the budget debate when he might have given them the information they now sought. He was also anxious, he said, to get more information concerning capital borrowings.

In many cases these should be shown under income account he declared. The result of previous practice had been that there were now $13,000,000 of intangible assets shown in public accounts.

Premier Brownlee asked that the list of questions be handed over.
H. J. Montgomery rose to support his leader, but the Speaker ruled that the whole discussion was out of order.

When the appropriation of $3,325 for natural resources research was under consideration and another of $4,250 for University Hospital equipment dealt with, Mr. Webster again strenuously attacked their inclusion in capital account.

Mr. Brownlee defended both appropriations. He explained that that for the hospital was for the treatment of cancer by radium and was very properly included in capital accounts.

Mr. Webster contended that as the hospital was receiving grants totalling $60,000 they ought to be able to save enough out of them to provide the radium.

Mr. Webster also moved for the elimination of an appropriation of $5,430 for legislative counsel and stenographer. He asserted this work ought to be done by one of the numerous lawyers under the authority of the Attorney-General.

If consideration had to be given to the present legislative counsel, he should be accommodated in that de-

In reply the Premier asserted that

Jack Frost—King of Architects

Jack Frost, nature's greatest architect, completed yet another wonderful job, at Banff, on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway through the Rocky Mountains, this winter, when he designed and built the columns of the ice-castle of the Carnival Queen. As is easily seen by the picture, the two great pillars are the outstanding features of the palace. They were built by putting into play, one month before the opening of the great event, two vertical streams of water. Then, more men got busy and built the connecting wall of gleaming transparent ice-blocks, between the two pillars, and set in front of it the great throne of ice, from which the ceremonies of the Carnival were conducted, in the presence of thousands of spectators from all parts of Canada and the United States. Snow and ice contests of all kinds, winter sports in profusion, including the Alberta Provincial Skating Championships, went to make up the programme, which terminated in the election of Miss Margaret J.

Nicol, of Drumheller, Alta., well-known as a tennis and hockey enthusiast, as Carnival Queen for 1932.
Her picture is shown inset.

Supply and Unemployment

In discussing the question of supply and unemployment in the House of Commons recently, Wm. Irvine, the member for Wetaskiwin, is reported by Hansard to have said the following:

Mr. William Irvine (Wetaskiwin): Mr. Speaker, it is probable that a vote will be taken on the amendment before the house, and since that amendment is regarded in parliamentary parlance as being a vote of want of confidence, and further since it involves a subject which is so important that it cannot be ignored, it becomes essential that the members of the group in this corner should express their view.

The opportunity presented by this amendment for a discussion of the vexed problem of unemployment is not as propitious as might have been desired. The hon. member for LaSalle (Mr. Bourassa), in his usual forceful eloquence, expressed the sentiments of the members in this corner when he decried the fact that this amendment had been offered in a political setting. It is very unfortunate that a question of such profound significance to the people of Canada should be brought into parliament in the manner in which this amendment presents it.

Undoubtedly we are all looking to the administration for a solution of the unemployment question, and as far as I am able to judge of the matter we will require to evolve a twofold policy. One policy will deal with the giving of sustenance to the people of Canada, the other with the giving of work to those who have lost their means of livelihood because of a lack of work. That is the first task to be faced by the administration. The second policy should be designed to bring about an ultimate or fundamental reformation which will remove the economic cause of unemployment. The policy of providing work for unemployed rather than giving charity, was brought up at the last session of parliament, as the leader of the opposition (Mr. Mackenzie King) has just stated. At that time it appeared to me to be the general opinion of this house that the policy of providing work for the unemployed was more acceptable than that of the granting of doles. It seemed to be a plausible policy, and I think it was generally agreed that it was the best, but I am not sure to-day that it is. I have visited some of the relief camps which have been established under the control of the administration, and I found them to be very satisfactory. I refer, of course, to the camps established for the building of a highway in northern Ontario. The work was being engaged in by the workers with a great deal of zest, the places where they lived were clean, wholesome and comfortable, and the food provided of an excellent character. If all the unemployed in Canada could enjoy the same conditions I do not think there would be any immediate cause for objection. However, I believe that such relief projects ultimately will have to be abandoned. I express that edly that of giving doles instead of trying to give work. I am not advocating giving doles; I do not think that is a cure for unemployment, but in view of the financial stringency through which we are passing, the government may be forced to take the cheapest course instead of the best. But in any case I would insist that the people in Canada who have no money or work and thus have no food, shall be fed, clothed and sheltered. To do that the state must assume the responsibility and must pay the bill. It remains for us to discover the best means by which the state can render that assistance to that part of the population which requires it.

In regard to the other phase of the matter namely, the ultimate policy I do not regard this as being an opportune moment to express what ever opinion I may hold in that regard. As the matter now stands, the question has pointed out there is on the order paper a measure which will afford an opportunity for a discussion of that sort, and I have no doubt, before the session ends the government will furnish—at least I hope it will—an opportunity of discussing this question under more favorable circumstances. But in passing I would say that reformation fundamental and constructive in regard to the economic problem which causes unemployment is imperative. That reformation must and will come either by legislation or by revolution. If parliament wants to prevent the latter, it must see to it that it provides the former. We must provide legislation that will bring the reformation necessary if we are to prevent disaster in other ways. Parliament and the government must work together.

If we are to avoid the difficulties which we sometimes fear will arise, we must do something to prevent the necessity for such action being taken. There must be an approach fundamentally different from that made by any action so far, and from an entirely different understanding of the problem.

In that regard I am constrained to make a reference to the speech which has just been so eloquently delivered by the leader of the opposition. With perhaps this corner in mind, he referred to the nostrums of one kind or another which are sometimes proposed as a cure for the economic ills of our time. I do not of course know that he referred to this corner, but it is probable that he did. I do not think that in that respect this corner has pinned its flag to any particular method, although it is true we have advocated a number of things which we believe have an economic bearing on the problem. But leaving that aside, the leader of the opposition says that the economic problem is the same today as it has been ever since the world had an economic system. I have no doubt that he is announcing his incapacity to lead any modern nation in the circumstances now confronting it; for I challenge his view in that regard and say that never before in the world's history has there been a situation so similar to the present one, and that no policy that has been satisfactory in the past can possibly be applied to the present day. It may be all very well for him to say that the lower tariff policy of the Liberal party is going to be good enough for all time. I do not believe that, neither do I believe that the high tariff policy of the Conservative party is going to be good enough for all time. In fact, I would say that neither has been good enough for any time, and I do not think either has a very serious bearing upon the economic problem of the present day.

If we are going to continue industry on the basis of competition for private profit, it is certain that we shall end in disaster. All efforts made to cope with the situation on that basis I regard as being doomed to failure. Sooner or later this parliament and country must make a definite decision on that matter. Until that decision is made I am not very much interested in any proposal, no matter what side of the house it comes from, because I firmly believe that unemployment cannot be cured under the present economic system, and that the first step towards a cure is a definite decision by the government and parliament that a new system must be introduced. Shall we continue to nurse the aged and dying system while youth and hope die for lack of attention? That is the problem as I see it. The decision, as I say, must be made to reconstruct our economic life on a new basis and for purposes very different from those which obtain now. Until that decision is made, I repeat, I have not very much faith in the outcome of any proposal which has in view the ultimate ending of unemployment.

Meanwhile, may I point out that Canada's richest deposits of wealth are being wasted and worse than wasted. Canada's youth is her richest vein of gold. What opportunities we have provided for the armies of young men who are coming here year by year into the industrial field demanding the right to live by labor? I ask that question of myself and I

Protect yourself from constipation by eating a delicious cereal. Tests show Kellogg's All-Bran provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. In addition, All-Bran furnishes blood-building iron. The "bulk" in All-Bran is similar to that of lettuce. Within the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of waste. How much safer than pills and drugs—so often habit-forming.

ask it of every hon. member in this house. Coming up for the year 1932 is an army of bright and intelligent young men and women of Canada. A similar army came up last year, and one the year before; another will come the year following, and they are faced with the same industrial ills; opportunity for expansion in life's affairs is denied them. What is parliament going to do this year in order to give these young people an opportunity? The nation which cannot find opportunity for its youth will be of premature senility, and it deserves the fate. While Canada youth is faced with that disaster we squabble in this house for a solid two days over a matter of political prestige or advantage, without bringing forward a single constructive policy to solve the problem. That is the fact the matter as I see it. I maintain the plight of youth not to be historical, but to bring home to this parliament more poignantly if possible than anything else could bring home, the importance of the question now before us and of finding some solution for it before we leave to go back to our homes.

I come to the amendment which has been proposed. I have no doubt—at least I am not permitted to doubt—that the hon. member who moved this amendment (Mr. Heenan) is sincere in his objective. But it is rather a remarkable thing that the late Minister of Labour should find nothing better to offer to the unemployed than a huge hash of the speeches of the Prime Minister for the last three years, and that is what he brings to parliament as a solution of the unemployment problem. I shall not weary the house by reading what has been read already in a dozen times. In the last few years, has been placed on Hansard on different occasions and given to the country in various ways. I fail to see what significance it can have in relation to the unemployment problem other than a political one. I do not know if it is in the case, but certainly it appears to me that in the amendment the reference to a solution of the unemployment problem is more of a means than an end to be gained. Of course adoption of the motion involves the defeat of the administration, and it is distinctly political in its objective. We are not very much interested over in this corner in the life of this administration or any other, nor are we particularly interested in the hopes of the opposition to get over where the present administration now is. That question has never been a very serious one for members of the group over here. Nevertheless, we are forced to express an opinion and sometimes to vote on questions of this character, and we must indicate our position.

The amendment in itself, I say, is distinctly political in character. When we look at the amendment in the light of the statement of the leader of the opposition, that unemployment as a national emergency and then look at the resolution which is proposed to meet that national emergency I really do not know what to say about the matter. It is beyond comment. So far as our group here is concerned, and I think I am speaking for the group in this regard, we are not going to vote for the amendment, because we regard it as purely a political amendment, but we say to the hon. gentleman who moved it and to the members of the opposition, that whenever they bring in a positive resolution that will bear upon the problem of unemployment we shall be more than glad to stand with them. But when it comes to a matter of this sort, to an amendment which has clearly but one objective and that the making of political capital out of this national emergency, we do not intend to sustain their desires with our votes. On the other hand, we do not feel disposed to vote against the amendment, for this reason: We do not think the government has solved the problem of unemployment any more than do the hon. gentlemen who have been proposing and supporting the amendment, and we are looking forward to a statement of policy by the government in this session of parliament on this question. Therefore we would not like to indicate by our votes that we are perfectly satisfied with all that the government has done in the matter. On the other hand, we are not hypocritical. We know that this problem has been difficult. We know that the government has done something. We know that they have kept people from starving. We are looking forward to a better policy. So, Mr. Speaker, this is one of those peculiar motions in respect to which we shall take neither by not voting at all, neither for nor against, but rather await the proposal of the government, or a better proposal from the opposition, bearing on the problem.

CARE AND FEEDING OF SPRING LITTERS

Much can be accomplished toward the production of healthy litters by keeping the brood sows in healthy condition by providing suitable feeds, comfortable shelter, and exercise. Constipation has a very harmful effect on both the sow and litter and care must be taken to prevent this condition if healthy litters are to be expected. The addition of bran is helpful in correcting constipation and it also tends to increase the milk flow. Exercise is an important aid in keeping the sows in good health. Feeding potassium iodide to brood sows during the winter months provides good insurance against weak or halfpenned litters.

Young pigs make their most economical gains during the suckling period and for this reason it is advisable to feed the nursing sow and litter and care her to properly nourish the litter. The critical time in the life of the market hog is during the weaning period. Pigs that are thrifty following the weaning period make more economical use of feed consumed, and develop more rapidly than those that are weaned on unsuitable rations and receive a set-back. The change from sow's milk to a meal ration is an abrupt change even under the best of conditions. Supplying suitable feeds during this period reduces the shock of such a change to a minimum. Providing a separate enclosure adjoining the sow's quarters for the litter enables the feeder to start the young pigs on their meal ration a week or ten days before they are weaned. Young pigs are unable to utilize fibre in the ration, such as the hulls of oats and barley, and in many cases hulls are present in sufficient quantities in these feeds to be quite harmful. Sifting the hulls from oat and barley chop is helpful during the first few weeks after weaning. On account of their rapidity of growth young pigs require an ample supply of nourishment, and due to their relatively small stomachs, the feed must be easily digested, supplied regularly and at shorter intervals than is usually the practice with older pigs. The supplying of suitable feeds and necessary care at this stage of the young pigs growth has a greater bearing on the economical production of pork than at any other stage in the development of the market hog.

In a series of these weaning tests conducted at the Dominion Experimental Farm Brandon, in 1931, the use of skim-milk in addition to a meal ration of pork chops, after barley chop, and middlings, increased the average gain per pig by twenty-three per cent over those fed the meal ration only. The addition of seven per cent of tankage in the meal ration increased the average gain by seven per cent over those fed the meal ration only. All pigs used in the first test were fed meal only for ten weeks after the conclusion of the weaning test. At the end of ten weeks, the pigs fed meal only during the weaning period averaged 104 pounds, those fed tankage during the weaning period 121 pounds, and those fed milk during the weaning period 131 pounds.

Under present conditions it becomes increasingly important to keep production costs at the lowest possible level. The use of suitable rations and judicious care and feeding assist toward the reduction of costs during the growing and finishing periods.

and also Saturday afternoon.

A debate on a resolution moved by George H. Webster, Liberal leader,
asking that wheat pool trust funds
be invested in order to provide agricultural scholarships at the Alberta University aroused considerable debate.

Mr. Webster attacked the expenditures from this fund from year to year in no measured tones. He declared that far too much had been
spent on traveling expenses and that none of the money had been used in the interests of agriculture. He quoted figures showing that large sums
had been paid to various co-operative associations. It was a wrong principle, he declared, to make grants to associations which were losing money
in order that they might compete
against men who had been successful in building up big business of their own.

Mr. Webster was warmly supported by H. J. Montgomery, Liberal, Wetaskiwin, and Hector Lang, Liberal, Medicine Hat.

The Liberals also received support from the Conservative benches, D.
M. Duggan, leader, expressing heartfelt sympathy with the resolution.

Premier Brownlee strongly defended expenditures from the fund, arguing that money spent for co-operation was of the greatest value to the agriculture of this province. Hon.
George Hoadley, Minister of Agriculture, also defended the trustees. Hon.
Percy Barker agreed with the idea of more scholarships, but did not say that this particular fund should be used to supply them.

Premier Brownlee suggested that
the resolution might obtain stronger
support if the scholarships were to
be provided at provincial schools of agriculture instead of at the University.

The resolution, however, was lost.
Discussion of the bill to validate
the agreement with the Dominion Government for policing the province by the R.C.M.P. provided the opportunity with plenty of ammunition. The Liberal benches were particularly keen in their questions. H. J. Montgomery being continually on his feet
with queries in the interests of men of the A.P.P.

At one stage of the discussion F.
C. Moyer, Independent, Burnhamthorpe, declared he would vote against the
bill unless greater clarity were given.
The pension fund was the cause of
most of the queries and the discussion waged back and forth across the house, with the opposition raising
point after point. The Liberals leading the way with this verbal harrassment.

In the end the bill was passed.
J. M. Dechenne, Liberal, St. Paul,
had a couple of hours all to himself
when he proposed a resolution urging that the money collected by
means of the supplementary tax be
used for roadway purposes in the municipalities in which it was collected.

He pointed out that roadway work
was urgently needed in many parts of the province. The cutting down of the estimates in the public works department would result in many municipalities being unable to provide relief for their unemployed.

At one stage he said the Premier
reminded him of Eliza crossing the
river, jumping from one ice cake to
the other, but safely reaching the shore; so the Premier could jump all
over the place and yet had the ability
to defend the government no matter
in what corner it found itself.

The resolution was defeated, no member speaking to it.

A resolution of W. H. Shields, U.
P. A. Stettler, urging an investigation into the possibilities of substi-

tuting a "managed currency" in place of the present gold system, also
brought a long debate in which the Liberals took no part. Contrary to expectations it was given support by
D. M. Duggan, Conservative leader, and in the end was passed unanimously.

H. J. Montgomery, Liberal, Wetaskiwin, in discussing the resolution,
strongly urged a cancellation of war
debts and the lowering of existing tariffs.

A motion by H. Bossenberry, Liberal, requesting the provincial auditor to furnish any member with information concerning the financial affairs of the province was defeated.
Conservatives and Labor voting with
the government. Those opposed numbered 45, those in favor 11.

Mr. Bossenberry contended the taxpayers were entitled to the information and the only way they could get
it was through their legislative representatives.

Premier Brownlee said the resolution touched upon a vital principle of government administration. The provincial auditor was a servant of
the legislature and not of an individual legislator.

J. J. Bowlen, Liberal, said it was often necessary to have correct figures which could only be obtained from the auditor. He was supported by F. R. Falconer, Liberal.

W. R. Howson, Liberal, agreed that the Premier could always give out
correct information because he had
it, but the opposition could not get
accused by Hon. O. L. McPherson of giving out half truths. He resented
that suggestion from the Minister as a veiled insult.

Mr. Howson was called to order by the Speaker who said he could not
make use of the word insult or insulting. Mr. Howson withdrew "veiled insult" and substituted "veiled suggestion."

The motion was strongly opposed
by the treasury benches and was
supported by F. C. McGill, Conservative, Calgary. It was defeated by 45
to 11.

Introduction of the income tax act provided another opportunity for the opposition to get busy. As previously indicated, the Liberals strongly opposed the measure from the start. It weathered its first storm on 11th reading when, by a vote of 47 to 11,
the house approved its introduction.
Being a money bill the approval of
the Lieutenant governor first had to be obtained and then a resolution

placed on the order paper giving notice of its introduction.

When the bill came up for second reading a further broadside was loosed.
This time the Laborites were to the fore. Fred White, Calgary, while agreeing with the principle of an income tax declared the present schedule which taxed incomes as low as $750 was unfair. He moved an amendment declaring: "In the opinion of the legislature the bill, as
drawn, conflicts with the proper principle of the tax system by encroaching on the subsistence wages of single and married workers and should be
redrafted on the basis that will con-
fine its effects to surplus income and
corporation revenue."

At the conclusion of Mr. White's speech Mr. Webster moved the adjourning of the debate. When it is resumed the heavy artillery of the Liberals is expected to get into action.

Limiting of ministerial and other government salaries to a maximum of $5,000 and advocated by W. R.
Howson, Liberal, during the discussion of the estimates. He urged that those in excess of this amount make
voluntary contributions to the unemployment relief fund. His motion was lost.

For the most part the week has been taken up with the discussion of private members resolutions. A resolution moved by Andrew Smeaton, Lethbridge, after being amended,
which urged the necessity of unemployment insurance was passed unanimously. A suggestion by George H.
Webster, Liberal, that a contributory unemployment insurance failed to receive support.

Another resolution which met no opposition was moved by Chris. Pattinson, Edson. It urged the appointment of a committee to investigate
and report on the advantages of state
medicine. It caused a lengthy debate but received the support of the medical members of the house. The Liberals took no part in this long
talkfest.

Dividing on non-party lines, the
house adopted a motion calling for a conference of legislators of three prairie provinces. The Liberals voted solidly against this resolution.
They were supported by five Conservatives and six members on the government side, including Hon. O. L.
McPherson and Hon. V. W. Smith.

Replying to questions, H. J. Montgomery, Liberal, Wetaskiwin, and Hon. George Hoadley informed the house that it would cost
between $50,000 and $75,000 for temporary seed grain during the coming season.

A resolution of Hugh C. Parthing, Conservative, Calgary, asking for full
statements of the amount spent in advertising by certain co-operative associations with the U.P.A. provoked a strenuous defence on the part of the government. It was lost on a vote of 37 to 16. Liberals supported the Conservatives although they took no part in the debate. Independents also voted against the government.

While estimates were being discussed Mr. Webster stated the Liberals had been accused of being the most ineffectual group in the house.
They intended, he said, to retain that ineffectiveness as long as it was necessary to obtain information from the government.

Thursday afternoon tributes were
paid to the A.P.P. by Attorney-General Lymburn, W. R. Howson, J. Mackintosh, Bow Valley, Fred White, Calgary and D. M. Duggan.

Mr. Webster and Premier Brownlee
had a number of sharp exchanges
Thursday, just before consideration
of estimates was resumed. Mr.
Webster intimated he had prepared a list of questions which he wished to
hand to the provincial treasurer in
order that the government might be prepared to deal with them when
the items came up for consideration.

He was particularly in search of
information concerning the public treasurer's budget. He regretted the provincial treasurer had not closed the budget debate when he might have given them the information they now sought. He was also anxious, he said, to get more information concerning capital borrowings.

In many cases these should be
shown under income account he declared. The result of previous practice had been that there were now $10,000,000 of intangible assets shown in public accounts.

Premier Brownlee asked that the
list of questions be handed over.

H. J. Montgomery rose to support his leader, but the Speaker ruled
that the whole discussion was out of order.

When the appropriation of $3,325
for natural resources research was
under consideration and another of $4,550 for University Hospital equipment deal with Mr. Webster again strenuously attacked their inclusion
in capital account.

Mr. Brownlee defended both appropriations. He explained that for the hospital was for the treatment of cancer by radium and was very properly included in capital accounts.

Mr. Webster contended that as
the hospital was receiving grants totalling $60,000 they ought to be able
to save enough out of them to provide the radium.

Mr. Webster also moved for the elimination of an appropriation of $5,450 for legislative counsel and stenographer. He asserted this work ought to be done by one of the numerous lawyers under the authority of the Attorney-General.

If consideration had to be given to the present legislative counsel, he
should be accommodated in that de-

In reply the Premier asserted that certain consolidations were under consideration which might result before next session in this office being eliminated.

Jack Frost—King of Architects

Jack Frost, nature's greatest
architect, completed yet another
wonderful job, at Banff, on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway through the Rocky Mountains,
this winter, when he designed and built the columns of the ice-castle of the Carnival Queen. As is easily seen by the picture, the two great
pillars are the outstanding features
of the palace. They were built by

putting into play, one month before
the opening of the great event, two vertical streams of water. Then,
more men got busy and built the
connecting wall of gleaming transparent ice-blocks, between the two
pillars, and set in front of it the
great throne of ice, from which the
ceremonies of the Carnival were
conducted, in the presence of thousands of spectators from all parts of

Canada and the United States. Snow
and ice contests of all kinds, winter
sports in profusion, including the Alberta Provincial Skating Championships, went to make up the
programme, which terminated in
the election of Miss Margaret J.
Nicol, of Drumheller, Alta., well-known as a tennis and hockey enthusiast, as Carnival Queen for 1933.

Supply and Unemployment

In discussing the question of supply and unemployment in the House of Commons recently, Mr. Irvine, the member for Wetaskiwin, is reported by Hansard as having said the following:

Mr. William Irvine (Wetaskiwin): Mr. Speaker, as it is probable that a vote will be taken on the amendment before the house, and since that amendment is regarded in parliamentary parlance as being a vote of confidence, and further since it involves a subject which is so important that it cannot be ignored, it becomes essential that the members of the group in this corner should express their view.

The opportunity presented by this amendment for a discussion of the vexed problem of unemployment is not as propitious as might have been desired. The hon. member for LaBelle (Mr. Bourassa), in his usual forceful eloquence, expressed the sentiments of the members in this corner when he declared the fact that this amendment had been offered in a political setting. It is very unfortunate that a question of such profound significance to the people of Canada should be brought into parliament in the manner in which this amendment presents it.

Undoubtedly we are all looking to the administration and to this parliament for a solution of the unemployment question, and as far as I am able to judge of the matter we will require to evolve a twofold policy. One policy will deal with the giving of assistance to the people of Canada, and the other will deal with the giving of support for those who have lost their means of livelihood because of a lack of work. That is the first task to be faced by the administration. The second policy should be designed to bring about an ultimate or fundamental reorganization which will remove the economic cause of unemployment. The policy of providing work for unemployed rather than giving charity, was brought up at the last session of parliament, as the leader of the opposition (Mr. Macdonald King) has just stated. At that time it appeared to me to be the general opinion of this house that the policy of providing work for the unemployed was more acceptable than that of the granting of doles. It seemed to be a plausible policy, and I think it was generally agreed that it was the best, but I am not sure to-day that it is. I have visited some of the relief camps which have been established under the control of the administration, and I found them to be very satisfactory. I refer, of course, to the camps established for the building of a highway in northern Ontario. The work was being engaged in by the workers with a great deal of zeal, the places where they lived were clean, wholesome and comfortable, and the food provided of an excellent character. If all the unemployed in Canada could enjoy the same conditions I do not think there would be any immediate cause for objection. However, I believe that such relief projects ultimately will have to be abandoned. I express that opinion reluctantly, but in view of all the circumstances I am afraid that this is what will happen. It is clear that no government has ever entered into any industry similar to that being carried on by private institutions, because to do so would mean that the government so doing would come into conflict with private property and the capitalist system in general. The activities left to the government to undertake on behalf of the unemployed must be of a class usually undertaken by governments, and this is limited to a certain kind of so-called public works. The most popular kind of public work undertaken by governments in cases of unemployment in this country is the building of roads and highways, because private companies do not usually do that. What is the situation in that regard? We find in the first instance that governments must borrow the money with which to carry on that work, and at the present time such money will be borrowed at a very high rate of interest, thus paying to the bondholders not only the usual but even a higher interest rate than it is customary for them to collect. Next, the work on those highways is frequently given away, and in contract, although this has not been done in the locality I visited, it has been in some instances in Alberta, I believe, under contract through the municipalities and the provincial government.

Mr. Arthur: Not in Ontario.

Mr. Irvine: That allows a profit for the contractor. Then the materials are purchased at prices which permit a profit to those who deal in the commodities required. That leaves the lowest figure of wages to be paid to the people for whom all the work is originally undertaken, and finally, to cap the climax, as we sometimes say in popular parlance, the government has to accept what might be about 60 per cent of the actual work value for the money that it has expended. That is to say, work undertaken for the building of a highway in the winter time in this country is very difficult to perform economically and the result usually is that about 60 per cent of what would be done under suitable conditions would be given under the present circumstances. For those reasons I doubt whether the policy of the state providing work to meet an unemployment situation, which has become so serious as to be described by the leader of the opposition a few minutes ago as a national emergency, can be carried on. However, the government has to pay the bill. Winter work, as I say, is not an economic proposition, with the result that the government has to pay a very high sum for a very low return, and in view of the present financial situation throughout the world, I doubt whether such a policy can be continued indefinitely. The government of this country, like the governments of other countries, will ultimately be forced to take what may not be the best course, but the cheapest course, and under the present circumstances the cheapest course in the last analysis is undoubtedly that of giving doles instead of trying to give work.

eddy that of giving doles instead of trying to give work. I am not advocating giving doles; I do not think that is a cure for unemployment, but in view of the financial stringency through which we are passing, the government may be forced to take the cheapest course instead of the best. But in any case I would insist that the people in Canada who have no money or work and thus have no food, shall be fed, clothed and sheltered. To do that the state must assume the responsibility and must pay the bill. It remains for us to discover the best method by which the state can render that assistance to that part of the population which requires it.

In regard to the other phase of the matter namely, the ultimate policy I do not regard this as being an opportune moment to express what-over opinion I may hold in that regard. The activities left to the government has pointed out there is on the order paper a measure which will afford an opportunity for a discussion of that sort, and I have no doubt, before the session ends the government will furnish—at least I hope it will—an opportunity of discussing that question under more favorable circumstances. But in passing I would say that reformation fundamental and constructive in regard to the economic problem which causes unemployment is imperative. That reformation may come either by legislation or by revolution. If parliament wants to prevent the latter, it must see to it that it provides the former. We must provide legislation that will bring the reformation necessary if we are to prevent disaster in general. Parliament and the government must not forget that if we are to avoid the difficulties which we sometimes fear will arise, we must do something to prevent the necessity for such action being taken. There must be an approach fundamentally different from that made by any nation so far, and from an entirely different understanding of the problem.

In that regard I am constrained to make a reference to the speech which has just been so eloquently delivered by the leader of the opposition. With perhaps this corner in mind, he referred to the existence of one kind or another which are sometimes proposed as a cure for the economic ills of our time. I do not of course know that he referred to this corner, but it is probable that he did. I do not think that in that respect he was wrong, but I think that in any particular case, although it is true we have advocated a number of things which we believe have an economic bearing on the problem. But leaving that aside, the leader of the opposition says that the economic problem is the same today as it has been ever since the world had an economic system. If he really means that, he is announcing his incapacity to lead any modern nation in the circumstances now confronting it; for I challenge his view in that regard and I think that the situation of the world has been there a situation similar to the present one, and that no policy that has been satisfactory in the past can possibly be applied to the present day. It may be all very well for him to say that the lower standard of living is the cause of the going to be good enough for all time. I do not believe that, neither do I believe that the high tariff policy of the Conservative party is going to be good enough for all time. In fact, I would say that neither has been good enough for any time, and I think either has a very serious bearing upon the economic problem of the present day.

If we are going to continue industry on the basis of competition for private profit, it is certain that we shall end in disaster. All efforts made to cope with the situation on that basis I regard as being foredoomed to failure. Sooner or later this parliament and any country must make a definite decision on that matter. Until that decision is made I am not very much interested in any proposal, no matter what side of the issue it comes from, because I firmly believe that unemployment cannot be cured under the present economic system, and that the first step towards a cure is a definite decision by the government and parliament that a new system must be introduced. Shall we continue to nurse the aged and dying system while youth and hope die for lack of attention? That is the problem as I see it. The decision, as I say, must be made to reconstruct our economic life on a new basis and for purposes very different from those which obtain now. Until that decision is made, I repeat, I have not very much faith in the outcome of any proposal which has in view the ultimate ending of unemployment.

Meanwhile, may I point out that Canada's richest deposits of wealth are being wasted and worse than wasted, Canada's youth is her richest vein of gold. What opportunities have we provided for the armies of young and women who are coming year by year into the industrial field demanding the right to live by labor? I ask that question of myself and I ask it of every hon. member in this house. Coming up for the year 1932 is an army of bright and intelligent young men and women of Canada. A similar army came up last year, and one the year before; and another will come the year following, and they are faced with closed industrial doors; opportunity for expansion in life's affairs is denied them. What is parliament going to do this year in order to give these young people an opportunity? The nation which cannot find opportunity for its youth will die of premature senility, and it deserves the fate. While Canadian youth is faced with that disaster we squabble in this house for a solid two days over a matter of political prestige or advantage, without bringing forward a single constructive policy to solve the problem. That is the fact of the matter as I see it. I mention the plight of youth not to be rhetorical, but to bring home to this parliament more poignantly if possible than anything else could bring it home, the importance of the problem now before us and of finding some solution for it before we leave to go back to our homes.

I come to the amendment which has been proposed. I have no doubt—at least I am not permitted to doubt—that the hon. member who moved this amendment (Mr. Heenan) is sincere in his objective. But it is a solution of the unemployment problem. I shall not weary the house by reading what has been read already half a dozen times, in the last few years, has been placed on Hansard on different occasions and given to the country in various ways. I fall back on the simplification it can have in relation to the unemployment problem other than a political one. I do not know if it is really the case, but certainly it appears to me that in the amendment the reference to a solution of the unemployment problem is more of a means than an end to be gained. Of course adoption of the motion involves the defeat of the administration, and it is distinctly political in its objective. We are not very much interested over in this corner in the life of this administration or of any other, nor are we particularly interested in the hopes of the opposition to get over where the present administration now is. That question has never been a very serious one for members of the group over here. Nevertheless, we are forced to express an opinion and sometimes to vote on questions of this character, and we must indicate our position.

The amendment in itself, I say, is distinctly political in character. When we look at the amendment in the light of the statement of the leader of the opposition, that unemployment as a national emergency and then look at the resolution which is proposed to meet that national emergency I really do not know what to say about the matter. It is beyond comment. So far as our group here is concerned, and I think I am speaking for the group in this regard, we are not going to vote for the amendment, because we regard it as purely a political amendment, but we say to the hon. gentleman who moved it and to the leader of the opposition that whenever they bring in a positive resolution that will bear upon the problem of unemployment we shall be more than glad to stand with them. But when it comes to a matter of this sort, to an amendment which has clearly by one objective and that the making of political capital out of this national emergency, we do not intend to sustain their desires with our votes. On the other hand, we do not feel disposed to vote against the amendment, for this reason: We do not think the government has solved the problem of unemployment any more than do the hon. gentlemen who have been proposing and supporting the amendment, and we are looking forward to a statement of policy by the government in this session of parliament on this question. Therefore we would not like to indicate by our votes that we are perfectly satisfied with all that the government has done in the matter. On the other hand, we are not hypocritical. We know that this problem has been difficult. We know that the government has done something. We know that they have kept people from starving. We are looking forward to a better policy. So, Mr. Speaker, this is one of those peculiar matters in respect to which we shall take shelter by not voting at all, neither for nor against, but rather await the proposal of the government, or a better proposal from the opposition, bearing on the problem.

Much can be accomplished toward the production of healthy litters by keeping the brood sows in healthy condition by providing suitable feeds, comfortable shelter, and exercise. Constipation has a very harmful effect on both the sow and litter and care must be taken to prevent this condition if healthy litters are to be expected. The addition of bran is helpful in correcting constipation and it also tends to increase the milk flow. Exercise is an important aid in keeping the sows in good health. Feeding potassium iodide to brood sows during the winter months provides good insurance against weak or hairless litters.

Young pigs make their most economical gains during the suckling period and for this reason it is advisable to feed the nursing sow well to enable her to properly nourish the litter. The critical time in the life of the market hog is during the weaning period. Pigs that are thrifty following gain weaning, the sucking period, and for this reason it is advisable to feed the nursing sow well to enable her to properly nourish the litter. a minimum. Providing a separate enclosure adjoining the sow's quarters for the litter enables the feeder to start the young pigs on their meal ration a week or ten days before they are weaned. Young pigs are unable to utilize fibre in the ration, such as the hulls of oats and barley, and in the use of skim-milk in addition to a meal ration of sifted oat chop, sifted barley chop, and middlings, increased the average gain per pig by twenty-three per cent over those fed the meal ration only. The addition of seven per cent of tankage in the meal ration increased the average gain by seven per cent over those fed the meal ration only. All pigs used in the first test were fed meal only for ten weeks after the conclusion of the weaning test. At the end of ten weeks, the pigs fed meal only during the weaning period averaged 104 pounds, those fed tankage during the weaning period 121 pounds, and those fed milk during the weaning period 131 pounds.

Under present conditions it becomes increasingly important to keep production costs at the lowest possible level. The use of suitable rations and judicious care and feeding assist toward the reduction of costs during the growing and finishing periods.

RELIGION A HAVEN OF SAFETY

"Parson," exclaimed Ephraim, "I've got 'ligion, I tell you."
"That's fine brother. You are going to lay aside all sin?"
"Yes, suh."
"You're going to church?"
"Yes, sur-ree."
"You're going to care for the widows?"
"Sho' am!"
"Are you going to pay your debts?"
"No suh. Dat ain't 'ligion. Dat's business."

AN ESSAY ON WOMEN

(By David Sheets) There are three distinct kinds. Women of today may be divided into three distinct kinds. There are the kind that stay at home and work. They try to make every penny go as far as possible. They are always doing the "housework" thing, or doing something else useful in their spare time. A husband of today is lucky if he gets a wife of this kind. Then secondly there is the flapper. They are the important people of the present. They have to have a maid to do the house work. If they could dare put their hands into dish water it would ruin them. They go to the beauty parlor every day to have their hair and finger nails dressed. Some of them smoke as many cigarettes as the average man and the latter's wife almost drive their husbands crazy. These kind of women are bad enough but I must not forget the gossipers. Gossipers are not so uncommon as they used to be. They get up early in the morning and get the house work done although some of them don't seem to have time to do any work at home. They are a very busy bunch of people running from place to place gathering news. I am afraid they'll soon do the newspapers out of business. This kind of women cause more trouble in a day than the other could cause in a week. They ought to be hanged but luckily for them the law protects them.

MARY'S TRIAL JOB

Mary Page was hurrying down town this morning, the light of happiness upon her young face, a singing joy in her heart. For the first time in her life she had joined the procession of workers sweeping toward their daily occupations. She was now a business woman, if you please! It was raining slightly and she had no umbrella.

At the corner she met Grace Gray and they marched along together. Grace had a charming blue umbrella. Her clothes were new and stylish. Out of dark eyes she glanced rather disdainfully at Mary's makeshift attire, especially at the rubbers. The heels of Grace's pretty pumps were so high that she needed no rubbers.

"Got a job yet?" she queried.

"A trial job. If I make good—and I shall—it may become a permanent position."

"Who with?"

"V. B. Hurd & Co."

"You don't mean you're going to give him a try?" cried Grace.

"He's going to give me a try," returned Mary. "Why, what's the matter?" For Grace was laughing.

"I was with him three days once," Grace said. "Say, I wouldn't have stayed on another hour if he'd paid me a million dollars. Honest! I told him so. All he said was, 'Get out! That's old Henry Bassett. Hurd, Coarse, vulgar, always bawling you out. You'll last just about one day.'"

The light went out of Mary's face, the singing joy died in her heart. She swallowed hard at a lump in her throat. She was timid, nobody knew that better than herself. But she must work, she must earn wages.

Destiny waited for her at the vast mahogany desk in the spacious office of Hurd & Co. Up to this desk marched Mary, white as the handkerchief clutched in her slender hand.

"Who are you?" he growled.

"I am Miss Page, the new stenographer," replied Mary.

"Get to work then. I've got a lot of letters to answer."

Mary, with her new pencil, poised her new pen and opened her dictionary. Her heart thumped. She made a tentative pothook. What if stage fright had driven every blessed rule and regulation out of her head? But no! After the first few sentences her pencil moved quickly. She felt herself settling down.

For three days she worked, and nothing happened, that is, nothing to speak of. Of course, Mr. Hurd had thundered at her a few times, but she passed it over. Nothing—nothing should interfere with her making the grade. Why, last night when she went home she could see that things were looking up in the family already just because of her having this job.

That afternoon she was alone when a woman entered. She was small, dark, peppy and her platinum fox fur was beautiful.

"Where's the boss?" she demanded.

Mary explained that Mr. Griswold, who was the Co., was out of town, and that Mr. Hurd had stepped out for a few minutes.

The visitor thereupon ignored Mary. She went over to the desk and pulled at one of the drawers.

Color bounced into Mary's smooth young cheeks. She trembled a little.

"I've orders not to unlock that drawer unless it's for Mr. Pelham," she said.

"You're going to unlock it for me!"

"Sorry, ma'am, but I couldn't think of it." Mary said politely but firmly. She resumed her work. But the woman interrupted her by grabbing her by the shoulder.

"Give me that key!" she hissed.

Mary got out of her chair. She hadn't foreseen a hand-to-hand tussle but she didn't intend to give up the key. She was about to ring the bell that would summon help when the door opened and Mr. Hurd entered. He looked in surprise at the two women. Mary, grim with determination, the visitor flushed with excitement. Suddenly the other woman burst out laughing.

"Bill," she said, "I want the key to your private drawer."

"Hand it over, Miss Page," said Mr. Hurd.

Mary obeyed. From the corner of her eye she saw the woman rummage familiarly until she found a small memorandum book. She held it up for Mr. Hurd to see.

"There!" she said. "I know I left it here the other day." And she went out as if that was all she had come for.

The following morning Mr. Hurd turned from the telephone where he had been holding one of his brief colloquies.

"Miss Page," he said more cautiously than usual. "My wife wants you to lunch with her at the Carlton. She's there now waiting for you. Hurry right along. Nothing makes the missus so mad as to have to wait for somebody. I shan't eat lunch today, nothing but an apple."

Luncheon was wonderful. There was stringed music and flowers. Mrs. Hurd made a delightful hostess. You're a nice, trusty, little girl," she told Mary. "I'm going to make my husband keep you. And he's got to give you better wages than he's been paying. You're worth your twenty-five a week, Mary. Nothing's ever going to get by you."

WEEKLY STOCK MARKET REPORT

The following is a weekly report from the Edmonton Stockyards, as supplied to The Times for the week ending March 15th:

Receipts: Cattle, 614; Calves, 178; Hogs, 3172; Sheep, 163.

Under heavier receipts, and cattle which are showing somewhat more finish, the market has been on the active order, and trading brisk with buyers operating freely especially on heavyweight kinds. In consequence, salesmen have been moving their offerings readily, and making a good daily clean up. Sale so far this week indicate that prices are stronger, with buyers easier in their grading, except heavy steers and cows which are still inclined to show a draggy tone. The following are the prices:

The general run of good fed calves selling at $5.00 to $5.50, choice kind would bring a little more; medium $4.00 to $4.75. The general run of good butcher steers $4.50 to $4.75; choice kind would bring a little more; medium $4.00 to $4.25; fair kinds $3.50 to $4.00, common to fair $2.50 to $3.50. Good heavyweight butcher heifers $4.50 to $4.75, mediums $4.00 to $4.25, good heaves $3.50 to $3.75, and common to fair $2.50 to $3.25. The general run of good to choice cows $3.00 to $3.50, common to medium $2.00 to $2.75, canners and cutters $1.00 to $1.75 and bulls generally at $2.00 to $2.50, and as low as $1.50 for the common kinds.

Demand for stockers of all kinds comes quite good, with light to old. Prices are fairly steady with the general run of stocker steers, and heifers $3.25 to $4.00, stocker cows $2.25 to $2.75.

Calf market keeps fairly steady to firm, especially on the better grades. Good to choice light kinds $6.00 to $7.00, medium $5.00 to $5.50 and common to fair $3.50 to $4.50.

Hog market unsettled. Today, Tuesday, carloads sold at $3.75 for the bacon fed and watered, and trucked in at $3.65, with select bringing a premium of 50c per hundred and butchers discounted 50c per hundred. Cuts on the off grade hogs remain the same. Heavies discounted 75c per hundred extra heavies 75c per hundred. No. 1 sows discounted 75c per hundred. No. 2 sows discounted $1.00 per hundred, roughly discounted $1.25 per hundred, stage discounted $2.00 per hundred.

Considering the quality of the offerings, the sheep and lamb prices remain fairly steady, with the general run of lambs quoted at $4.50 to $5.00, choice kinds a little higher, yearlings $3.50 to $4.00 and ewes $2.50 to $3.50.

RICKETS

Present in our food are certain substances called vitamins. The chemical composition of these substances is unknown, but it has been proved that they are essential to life and health. Six vitamins have been discovered. The lack of one or other of the vitamins leads to one of the deficiency diseases, to which group rickets belongs.

Rickets is a deficiency disease because it is a lack of vitamin D (the anti-rachitic vitamin in the diet). The disease occurs most commonly between the second and eighteenth months of life, the period of most rapid growth in infancy and early childhood.

Rickets affect the whole body. The rapidly growing bones fail to harden properly, with the result that the ends of the long bones above the wrists are thickened, and there are swellings where the ribs join the breastbone. If the condition continues untreated it results in deformity of the long bones which causes bow legs and knock-knees. The change in the ribs brings about the deformity known as pigeon-breast.

In addition to the changes noted in the bone, the child will also show a protruding abdomen; he will be slow in walking and his general physical condition will be poor; he will be subject to digestive disturbances and frequent colds.

Rickets in a mild form is comparatively common, but it is usually not recognized by the child's mother until some of the more severe symptoms mentioned above develop. The most desirable thing to do is to prevent the disease, failing which it is important to recognize its presence early in order to secure proper treatment and thus prevent the more serious damage which occurs in untreated cases.

The early signs of rickets which should be heeded when observed are excessive sweating at the head, the rolling of the head, from side to side, when the child is in bed, crying of the child when handled, delay in cutting teeth and in learning to sit up, stand or walk, and indigestion and constipation.

Vitamin D is contained in cod-liver oil, egg-yolk and, to some extent, in milk. Cod-liver oil should be given to all children, whether they are being naturally or artificially fed beginning in the second month with ten drops twice a day, and gradually increasing the amount to one teaspoonful three times a day.

Certain rays of direct sunlight produce the same effects as does cod-liver oil, and children should be exposed to the direct sunlight. In winter, dependence must chiefly be placed on the cod-liver oil because of the comparative lack of sunlight.

The important truth which we wish to impress upon parents is that cod-liver oil and sunshine prevent rickets.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 154 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

GOT WEDDING AND AUCTION SALE MIXED

The editor of a country weekly was recently making up a page when he picked a wedding notice and the notice of a public auction sale. He gathered up the pie type and placed in into the form without taking a proof and this is the way it read:

William Smith, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Smith and Miss Lucy Anderson were disposed of at auction sale at my farm, one mile east of town, in the presence of seventy guests, including two mules and twelve head of cattle. Rev. Jones tied the nuptial knot for the two parties averaging 155 pounds on the hoof. The beautiful home of the bride was decorated with one snail, a rake, one feed grinder and two sets of harness nearly new. Just before the ceremony was performed Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" was rendered by a sow five years old and one sheep, who carrying a bunch of brides' roses on her head was very beautiful. The bride wore a light wagon, two crates of apples, three crates of potatoes, three racks of hay with a grin, and a tin of about 100 bushels of corn. The bride couple left yesterday for an extended trip. Terms cash.

WHEAT AND INCREASED WORLD POPULATION

A very important factor in the world wheat situation which is frequently overlooked by the general public is the yearly increase in the world's population. While undoubtedly there has been a slowing down of the rate of increase of population as compared with previous figures, the record for the ten-year period from 1920-30 shows that the yearly increase is 1,625,000. That means that in the year 1930 there were 16,250,000 more people to be fed than in the year 1920. Based on the estimate of Mr. Sanford Evans, a Winnipeg statistician, of 2½ bushels of wheat annual per capita consumption, in 1930 the world required 40,625,000 bushels of wheat more than it did in 1920.

The steady increase in the world population has been outdone by the increase in wheat acreage. For the 33 years up until 1930 the world's wheat acreage on the average increased from 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 acres per year. The trend has been the other way during the past two years, the decrease in acreage in the major wheat exporting countries last year alone having been 12,000,000 acres. If further reductions in acreage occur it will not take long for the demand for wheat to overtake the supply.

Eight carloads of snow were shipped 300 miles to Chicago for a ski jump.

Quickly Checked and a Restful Night Assured

RELIEVES COLDS WITHOUT "DOSING"

THE EVENING MEAL

(By Barbara B. Brooks)

The supper hour! It is the time of a lull in the wheels of industry, in the doing of bygone chores. It is offices where the business of nations is transacted, in the homely plowing of rich soil by those who stay their work and make their way across fields at the sound of the supper bell. Everyone is ready for food and rest.

To insure a restful, quiet and thoroughly enjoyable supper hour, work must be organized so that there will be few difficulties in the food and in the serving. A worried, nervous wife who gives allis for a wilted salad and a scorched roast or who is always nagging her children, is a poor conversationalist for the man who has been in business wrangles all during the day. He needs good food and comforting words. This means home co-operation and necessarily entails forethought on the part of the housewife. When late afternoon hours are to be spent away from home, there should be some previous preparation for the evening meal. Or meals should be prepared so that they can be prepared quickly.

A quickly prepared dinner: Tomato juice cocktail, baked whitefish (Spencer method), stuffed baked potatoes, mixed green salad, whole wheat bread, butter, baked apples filled with raisins, cheese, caffeine-free coffee, milk.

The above meal is not only easy to prepare but it is easy to digest. It will not disturb sleep during the night. The meal may also be eaten by children, with some restrictions for especially young children.

In preparing this meal the housewife should first devote her time to the potatoes and apples, making them ready for the oven. Next the fish can be prepared. It must not be put into the oven until fifteen to twenty minutes before serving time however. The table should then be set and serving dishes laid out, some to be warmed and some to be chilled.

If all the vegetables are crisp and cold it will take no time at all to make the salad. It is best mixed at the last minute or even at the table. The cream pitcher may be filled and placed in the refrigerator; the lemon sliced and the butter cut.

The apples will be done before the potatoes. Remove them and place on top of the oven or in the warming oven. Baked apples should be served either very hot or very cold, not lukewarm. As there is not sufficient time to chill them for this meal, they should be kept hot.

When the potatoes are almost done, heat some milk and butter for mashing the potatoes. Remove potatoes from oven, increase the heat and put in the fish. This same temperature oven may be used to brown the potatoes after they have been stuffed. While the fish is cooking the last minute touches can be put on the meal.

Of course this is only one meal and there are hundreds of occasions but with forethought all women can turn the supper hour to be the best of the day.

Fish—Spencer Method
Cut fish into serving pieces. Dip in salted milk, using 1 tablespoon of salt for each cup of milk. Evaporated milk may be used. Dip into fine ground or rolled corn flakes. Arrange on well oiled baking sheet and sprinkle liberally with oil. Bake in a very hot oven (500 deg. F.) for about ten minutes.

THE ROLE OF SEEDS IN CARRYING PLANT DISEASES

(Experimental Farms Note)
From the standpoint of yield and quality, the health of seed is a matter of great importance entering into the successful production of agricultural crops. Because of seed-borne parasites the crop may be a failure, notwithstanding the influence of such factors as nutrition, moisture, temperature and the chemical reaction of the soil.

It is customary to regard a seed as a specialized body containing the embryo plant which, under favorable conditions, is capable of growth and development into a normal plant. However, in appreciating this important provision of Nature we overlook the fact that seeds may carry and spread germs which cause plant disease epidemics, properly referred to as epiphytotic.

There are a number of known ways in which parasitic organisms or pathogens become associated with seeds. Ergot of wheat and rye for example is composed of a hardened mass of fungus threads which have developed within the seed to form the well-known black sclerotia. In the case of tomato wilt and certain smut diseases the spores or other reproductive stages of the fungus adhere to the surface of the seed. Bacteria, also, may contaminate the surface of seeds or they may be lodged under the seedcoat.

It is difficult to estimate the economic importance of seed-borne diseases, yet statistics show that this agency alone accounts for enormous losses. By consulting the latest plant disease survey report of the Division of Botany, Ottawa, we find that in the year 1930 the losses due to smut diseases of wheat in Western Canada for the three months ending October 31, were as follows:

Hard Red Spring 1.7 per cent Alberta Red Winter 5.5 per cent Durum 16.8 per cent
All Wheat 2.8 per cent

Compared with 1929 there was a marked increase in losses from smut or stinking smut in Hard Red Spring Wheat. Botanically speaking, potatoes are not seeds but they may be designated as such when used in propagation so that the diseases, transmitted through the agency of seed tubers may be logically classified as seed-borne. The extent to which diseases in this class affect the production of potatoes may be illustrated by figures contained in the 1930 report of the Dominion of Canada Seed Potato Inspection Service. Of the fields rejected in the various provinces because of disease mosaic was responsible for 53 per cent of the rejections. Blackleg was second with 9.4 per cent, and leaf roll third with 5.6 per cent. The matter of controlling seed-borne diseases is but part of the more general problem of plant disease prevention. Some noteworthy advances in this direction have been made by the Division of Botany. It is said that there have been 283 kidnappings in recent months in the United States.

Found guilty on four armed robbery charges, William Robert Willis, 27, was sentenced by Magistrate W. Dalison in police court Saturday to twenty years' imprisonment and twenty lashes. He will have to serve only five years, the four five-year terms having been made to run concurrently. IN MEMORIAM

Gone but not forgotten.
A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home Which never can be filled.
God in His wisdom has recalled The boon His love had given,
And though the body slumbers here,
The soul is safe in heaven.
In loving memory of our wife and mother, who died March 5th, 1932, from Husband and Daughters.
PHILIP EAMES.

CORRECTION

An error occurred in the advertisement of the City Meat Market, last week, in referring to "overized" ham. This should have read "overized" ham. This is a new product recently placed on the market, and Fritz claims that it cannot be beaten.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. Philip Eames and family desire to express their deep appreciation to their many friends for their expressions of sympathy and assistance during their recent and bereavement in the loss of their loving wife and mother, Mrs. Amelia Eames. They are also grateful for the many beautiful floral tributes.

An exchange says: A local farmer says the reason he hasn't got his car license yet is because he doesn't know what to part with to get it. He can sell ten fat hogs, or a fat beef, or 50 hens, or 100 pounds of butter, or 40 bushels of wheat. He is trying to make up his mind which of these products is likely to go lower and that's what he will sell.
